ROGER JAMES

BY DENA BISNETTE
Roger James, presently principal at North Bay Elementary School, will move to Bay Senior High next year.

Superintendent of Education Roger Oge' said he has re-signed James to the high school principal's slot, made vacant recently by a school board decision not to let Billy Rhodes continue in the post.

The board agreed to rehire Rhodes as a principal, but not as the Bay Senior High principal.

James' move is considered a reassignment rather than a reemployment matter and does not need school board approval, Oge' explained.

The superintendent added that he has assigned Rhodes, who is presently interim principal at Bay High, as James' assistant principal.

James has worked with the Bay St. Louis-Waveland School District for 23 years, where he has served as teacher, guidance counselor, assistant principal of Bay Junior High and North Bay principal.

He is a native of Catahoula and a graduate of Valena C. Jones High School.

James has bachelor of science degrees from Alcorn State University and Southern University in Baton Rouge, La., and a specialist's degree in elementary and secondary administration from University of Southern Mississippi.

The North Bay principal's job had not yet been assigned, Oge' added.

Trooper memorial services set today in Bay St. Louis

BY ELLIS CUEVAS
A memorial graveside ceremony will be held at 2 p.m. today for Mississippi State Trooper William (Bill) Kenny, who died in the line of duty on Dec. 21, 1987.

The memorial services will be held in St. Mary's Cemetery, Necessaire Avenue, Bay St. Louis, at the grave site of Kenny who died in an auto accident on US-90 in Pass Christian.

Graveside ceremonies will be held throughout the state of Mississippi today for State Troopers who died in the line of duty.

"As this year marks the 50th anniversary of the patrol, we find it especially important and appropriate to honor those men who lost their lives while serving as Mississippi state troopers," Col. Billie T. Hughes, assistant chief of patrol said.

"This memorial brings attention to the danger our men face each time they don their uniforms in the name of public safety," Hughes added.

On April 1, 1988, a monument was dedicated at Highway Patrol headquarters in Jackson in honor of all 20 fallen officers.

Kenny, of Bay St. Louis, died in an auto accident on US-90 in Pass Christian.

His widow, Eddie Kenny, and two sons, Mississippi State Trooper David Kenny, and Mike Kenny and two grandchil-

have to take charge of younger siblings. These "latchkey" children, who are among the fastest growing segment of this country's school-age population, are at risk unless they learn basic safety skills to make their time along safer and happier.

Recognizing the need to prepare these children for possible emergency situations and to give them other important safety information, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting has published a 16-page children's information and activities booklet titled "What If I'm Home Alone? Your Family's Guide to Home and Personal Safety Skills."

This booklet is part of a CPB public service campaign, conducted in conjunction with PBS' Community Outreach Project, "Child Care America," and is designed to help American families cope with the new reality of family life. Families where both parents work outside the home or families headed by a single parent now represent the majority of American families.

NASA needs ideas; is willing to share technology

BY D. C. HARVILL

In his now famous inaugural address, John F. Kennedy issued the admonition, "Ask not what your country can do for you — ask what you can do for your country."

The message sent to private industry in a presentation by a high ranking NASA official Tuesday at NSTL, and later at a Slidell Chamber of Commerce luncheon, sounded more like, "Ask not what your country can do for you—ask what you and your country can do for each other."

NASA's assistant director for Commercial Programs, James Rose, said commercial development of space has become a popular topic in Washington, with new emphasis being placed on expanding private sector involvement in the space program.

In order to facilitate private involvement in the space program, ram, the president in 1984 introduced initiatives designed to stimulate private sector investment in the program. Also, NASA was given a legislative mandate to seek and encourage commercial use of space, "to the maximum extent."

"The problem has been in getting the word out," Rose said.

In order to get "the word out" NASA has established the Small Business Innovative Research program, with offices in 18 states.

One of the 18 offices is located at NSTL.

According to Rose, NASA wants businesses and entrepreneurs to submit ideas for products that could be used by the space program.

"The vitality of this country is small business," Rose said. "Big businesses tend to lose their creativity because their incentives are not the same."

Interested businesses can find out what types of proposals NASA is looking for by contacting an SBIR office. They can also find out how to submit a proposal, and what other incentives and assistance are available.

If a proposed product has potential for use in the space program NASA will grant up to $50,000 for development of the idea.

If NASA decides the research warrants further development it will then provide up to $500,000 over a two year period.

Rose added that NASA cannot subsidize a profit making business, so once an enterprise enters a joint endeavor with NASA it either graduates from the program or fails.

Out of the 1,826 proposals submitted last year NASA only accepted 206.

Nine commercial research projects were chosen by NASA in April to be managed by the Earth Resources Laboratory at NSTL.

The projects are for use in the field of remote sensing, a method of gathering information about resources on the Earth's surface through satellite observations.

"New products and technology from America's space program will play an important part of that network," Rose said.

The real economic payoff for America, Rose said, will come when technologies developed for the space program begin producing new goods and services with value to customers here on Earth.

"New products and technology from America's space program will play an important part of that network," Rose said.

HIGH MINDED—James Rose, right, talks with Charles Whitehurst, director of the Earth Resources Laboratory at National Space Technology Laboratories, after a recent presentation Rose gave on commercialization of space. Rose, NASA's assistant administrator for commercial programs, said NASA will lend financial assistance to entrepreneurs with ideas that are beneficial to the space program. (Echo staff photo by D.C. I have been noticing how good the blooming oleanders look on the median of US-90 in Bay St. Louis. We know the city has been giving the plants a little attention in recent years and the beautiful blooms can be attributed to the care.

One thing about oleanders we are told is how the plants and seeds can be harmful if eaten, so parents should warn children about the dangers.

Today begins National Tourism Week and our Welcome Center on US-90 has numerous events planned through next Saturday.

We know there are many local residents who have never visited our Welcome Center, and are sure they would be surprised by the beauty of the facility.

Events of interest during the week will include:

Sunday - Antique train display.

Monday - Artist exhibit, quilting demonstration, pewter demonstration, space suit exhibit.

Tuesday - Transfer of Anderson's silk screen designs, space suit exhibit.

Wednesday - Slide presentation of flora and fauna of Mississippi Barrier Islands, basket weaving demonstration, space suit exhibit.

Thursday - Wood carving demonstration.

Friday - Demonstrations on chair caning, smocking, afghan crocheting, cotton spinning.

Saturday - Antique exhibit.

During the week, local garden club members will be serving refreshments and on certain days local chefs will be preparing special foods.

Sue VanZandt, Welcome Center manager and her staff, will be receiving a lot of assistance from volunteers to really make National Tourism Week a big week for travelers through our area.

Sue and her staff do a fine job welcoming visitors to Hancock County and all of the extras this week will show how our community can work together and help Hancock County continue to grow.

We hope to see you at the Welcome Center.

Tuesday is election day for the residents of Wards Three and Four in the City of Waveland.

Four candidates are seeking Ward Three's seat while two are seeking the Ward Four vacancy.

Every vote really counts. We can recall some Waveland Aldermen's races being settled by only one vote. It will be important for all of the qualified electors of Waveland in the two Wards to get out and vote.

Remember, the polls are open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Senator says private organizations can help foster understanding

Senator Thad Cochran (R-Miss.) says private organizations can play a valuable role in fostering better understanding among nations.

The senator praised the international education programs sponsored by the Rotary Foundation as being "positive influences for peace in the world."

Senator Cochran received a Foundation fellowship himself as a law school student in 1963. He spent a year studying international law at Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland.

"As we debate the ratification of the INF Treaty in the United States Senate, we are reminded how dangerous our world really is and how important it is for us to understand each other and try to get along without war," he said.

Senator Cochran also complimented Rotarians at their district conference on the Gulf Coast this weekend for helping protect the children of the world against the crippling effects of polio.

"By joining with the World Health Organization and the United Nations' Children's Fund, the Rotary Foundation is providing funds to achieve universal immunization against polio by 1990.

"This is one of the world's most brutal diseases, but it can be prevented," Cochran said. "Your generous contributions will make the difference in the lives of millions of children around the world."

Several hundred Rotarians from South Mississippi and Southeast Louisiana were attending their annual district convention in Biloxi.

The good news about skin cancer is that it is eminently curable in the early stages. Basal and squamous cell carcinoma can be removed by excising, scraping, or burning with an electric needle, x-ray treatments, freezing, or direct application of chemotherapy drugs.

A method known as Mohs surgery carefully removes cancerous tissue with microscopic control to ensure complete removal of any residual cancer roots. The procedure is done two or three times to maximize the cure rate and minimize damage to the surrounding, healthy skin.

It's generally reserved for difficult or recurrent skin cancer, when a simpler, quicker method isn't adequate. The surgery is particularly helpful when the cancer occurs on an eyelid, nostril, or other cosmetic or functionally critical area.

When the cancer is melanoma, the lesion and the surrounding area must be thoroughly removed. The smaller the lesion, the better the prognosis. Tri-state economic agreement signing set

The governor's of Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana will sign cooperative agreements on Friday to promote economic development and international trade, and to improve the quality of life in the three-state region.

Gov. Ray Mabus of Mississippi, and Govs. Bill Clinton of Arkansas and Buddy Roemer of Louisiana will sign the agreements on a barge in the Mississippi River off the shore from Rosedale, Mississippi, north of where the three states converge.

The barge will depart from Rosedale at 9:30 a.m. The signing ceremony will begin at about 10 a.m.

First, a general agreement of cooperation will be signed. This agreement calls for the three states to cooperatively seek ways to:

—Improve the quality of life in the region

—Create better lines of communication with the private sector.

—Enhance the image of the region, both domestically and abroad.

—And identify specific initiatives to solve common problems.

A second agreement calls for the states to promote friendly working relations with foreign countries in the areas of international trade, industry, technology, and in commerce, culture and tourism.

It is anticipated that Japan would be the first country targeted by the states.

Also under the second agreement, the governors can designate representatives who meet regularly to develop specific plans or initiatives. These representatives also would coordinate and conduct joint conferences, meetings and tours with officials from other countries.

Adequate room and facilities will be available aboard the barge for the print and broadcast media. The media is advised to be on the barge by 8:45 a.m.

Mississippi—last again in civil justice reform

The most significant vote of the 1988 legislative session may have taken place a few evenings ago on the floor of the House of Representatives.

The vote related to the question of civil justice reform, a state economic development issue and, probably, the most important business issue of the session.

House Judiciary Committees, dominated by trial lawyers, had just rejected eight of thirteen proposed reform bills; five less important proposals had been released by the committees for floor votes.

Then came the significant vote—a move was made on the House floor to bring all the civil justice reform issues out of the committee and onto the floor for full House action. Principal contents of the thirteen bills were contained in a single bill, and House members attempted to pull the omnibus bill from the committee for consideration by the full House of Representatives.

The effort failed, but this is why the vote was significant.

A majority of the House members who voted on the issue voted for consideration of the reform issue.

On the floor vote, fifty-seven House members voted to bring the omnibus civil justice reform bill to the floor; fifty-five opposed the move.

Under the rules seventy-five votes would have been necessary for removal of the bill from the committee. So, although a majority of the voting house members supported civil justice reform, the will of the majority had been thwarted.

This means that a majority of the members of the House—and other Mississippians who are suffering economic disadvantages because of the lack of civil justice reform legislation—must wait, again, until next year.

It appears that a small group of legislators who make up a majority of the membership of the two House Judiciary Committees are determined that, at least in the area of civil justice reform, Mississippi will be last again.

Zoning change denial recommended

BY D. C. HARVILL

The Bay St. Louis Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday recommended an application for a zoning change near the new post office be denied.

Paul Vegas of Bay St. Louis had requested the change from R-1 (single residence) to C-2 (light commercial) for construction of office buildings on the property located at the corner of Bouslog and Bismarck Streets

The denial recommendation was made, according to city clerk Edward Favre, at a hearing attended by about six residents of that neighborhood who voiced opposition to the change.

The recommendation goes to the city council for a final decision.

Commercial fishermen to provide

BY DENA BISNETTE
A group of commercial fishermen plan to attend a Waveland Board of Aldermen meeting when a proposed gill net ordinance is discussed.

The discussion is set for the May 18 meeting, which begins at 7:30 p.m. at Waveland City Hall.

The board agreed at the May 3 meeting to have the city attorney, Lucien Gex, prepare a draft ordinance for discussion purposes after a group of sport fishermen headed by Tommy Barrett asked that gill netters be limited to fishing outside a 1,200-foot boundary from the shoreline and that a closed season be declared for commercial fishermen during the months that specific species breed.

At the meeting, only one commercial fisherman, Charles Bourgeois, spoke about the proposal. Bourgeois, who was attending the meeting because he is superintendent of city util-ties and was not there as a fisherman, said that he felt any ban on gill netters should extend only from Sears Avenue to the Bay St. Louis city limits, leaving the areas where there is no beach open.

Two other commercial fishermen who were not at the meeting, Robert Metz and John Luksa, both of Lakeshore, said they expect the matter to be handled through the Mississippi Department of Wildlife Conservation Commission.

Metz said he and Luksa have talked to Waveland Mayor John Longo Jr. about the matter in an effort to provide a solution "that will be right for everybody."

According to Metz, commercial fishermen are already suffering because there are so many sections of the Mississippi Coast already closed to them.

"We have very little left to fish in; first they closed the barrier islands in 1980 and last year they closed Bay St. Louis for half the year. Why should we give up any more? We are taxpayers too," Metz said.

"Everybody including the horses and the dogs are allowed to use the beach, but they want to discriminate against us," he said.

Metz said that recreational fishermen have more area to fish because in addition to the beach and seawall they have the entire Jourdan River Complex above US-90 and the Pearl River north of the L&N Railroad Bridge.

He said there is presently a coalition of sport and commercial fishermen who are advocating a closed season each year during breeding seasons for commercial fishermen with that season to be determined by Bureau of Marine Resources biologists.

The coalition's proposed closed season would be 30 to 60 days, as the biologists determine, and would differ from the sport fishermen's proposed closure in that no recreational or commercial fishing would be allowed, Metz added.

The fishermen who appeared at the May 3 meeting asked that recreational fishing continue during seasons closed to commercial fishermen, contending that sport fishermen take so few fish that continuing during breeding season would not be detrimental to whatever particular species is being fished.

Metz and Luksa, however, cited creel landing studies that indicate that 65 percent of the fish landed by sport fishermen are illegal in size or creel limits. They attributed the studies to Bureau of Marine Resources.

"Some have landed more than 2,000 fish per year and we don't catch near that," Metz added.

Both of the commercial fishermen contend that enforcement against sport fishermen is apparently a very low priority with the bureau, but enforcement against commercial fishermen is extremely consistent despite the fact that such fishermen have to pay about $1,000 each year for the various licenses they must have to practice their trade in Louisiana and Mississippi.

"We have a higher incidence of keeping the law because we're checked continually," Metz said, adding that the commercial fishermen also have competition from sport fisher-

NORDA completes prototype AEM Bathymetry Bird

A team of ocean scientists and engineers from NORDA and Geophex, Ltd. of Raleigh, North Carolina, has completed fabrication of a novel, lightweight, airborne electromagnetic bathymetry platform.

Kuno Smits, who heads the Advanced Sensor and Survey Branch of NORDA's Mapping, Charting and Geodesy Division, says the prototype 21-foot-long "bird," designed to be towed from a helicopter, is shorter, lighter (under 300 lbs.) and slimmer (27 inches in diameter) than commercially available AEM units.

In addition, he says, the new system's digital transmitter and receiver give it a capability for electronic self-calibration and real-time interpretation and display. The new NORDA bird, designed for shallow ocean water surveying, is being developed primarily in response to Navy needs for a rapid and cost-effective technique to supplement or even replace traditional shipboard methods of acoustic (sounding) surveying, which are time-consuming and often not well suited to shallow coastal waters. In addition to routine charting, periodic and repeated bathymetric mapping of heavily-trafficked shallow-ocean regions is needed for monitoring sediment shifts, ship lane maintenance and a variety of geotechnical operations.

The need for a better bird than those commercially available was determined over the last few years from experiments conducted by the NORDA team off Cape Cod, Massachusetts and Chesapeake Bay, Maryland.

According to Ed Mozley, principal investigator for the NORDA AEM development, those experiments revealed significant problems from depending on a radar altimeter for precise altitude measurements, as well as amplitude, phase and zero level calibration errors, and measurement errors due to the pitching and yawing of the towed unit at lower altitudes.

The NORDA bathymetrists will be evaluating their new, long, white, cigar-shaped unit as a research tool in subsequent surveys in the coming months along the east and Gulf coasts, and will be modifying it, where feasible, to enhance its design even further.

Reflections

By Rev. Jerome Ledaux, SVD

Sometimes it is downright intriguing to reflect on some of the things which cross your mind as you are giving out Communion. Without doubt, it is the dynamics of the sharing of the Lord's Supper itself which cause so many things to boil up.

Recently, I reached the Sacred Bread toward someone and became fully aware how important that person was and how excited I was to be helping that person to share in the Lord's Supper.

No, I did not know the person, and, no, the person was not someone of importance in worldly terms. Yet, it was crystal clear that I was dealing with someone important and exciting.

Now did it stop there. After that, everyone in the Communion line took on the same air of importance and excitement.

Then it hit me. Each person anywhere on earth is a worthy object of excitement. True, some people are more exciting than others, but everyone bears the stamp of excitement.

I'm excited about you, sister, although your name means practically nothing to anyone. A big name you may never have, and easily recognized you may never be. But it is enough for me to look into your face to realize that I am excited about you.

And you, brother, I'm excited about you too, despite the fact that you have no claim to fame. You are not a celebrity or one who has made a splash by great exploits or by huge success in entertainment, sports, music or some other exciting field.

That makes no difference. Both you and the sister without a big name are exciting to me, because both of you are siblings to me with Jesus under one God. I'm excited about you.

I'm excited about you, whether you are a top-flight professional or not, whether you have scaled the ladder to the top rung or have stopped at the bottom, whether you are gainfully employed or pounding the sidewalks looking for a job, that I am excited about you.

You may be of a snubbed or even despised race or ethnic group. That makes absolutely no difference to me, because I'm excited about you. All I can see in your different hue, body, face or culture is a variant, exciting expression of humanness.

I'm excited about you, sister, because I see and experience in you the same personality traits which I find in myself. You are almost a mirror of me, of my mannerisms, of my reactions, of my mood swings and of the things which make me laugh or weep.

Brother, I'm excited about you, even though your personality differs radically from mine. While certain of your expressions and mannerisms seem drab or quite alien to my way of doing, feeling and reacting, I'm nevertheless excited about you, my fellow human.

I'm excited about you, notwithstanding the fact that you have no money and that you have seldom had much more than a penny to your name. It is you, the person, not money and possessions, who embody the genuine excitement which is in the world.

Never mind that you have fallen prey to one or more addictions. You must feel that your human dignity is gone and that you are a failure. Still, I'm excited about you. You can make it.

I'm excited about you, even if you have strayed from the straight and narrow. Even if you are sin-laden and/or crime-laden, Jesus can bring us all back to where we belong. I'm excited about you, in many instances because of who you are, what you do, what you have done. Just as often, through Jesus.

Hancock Medical Center Auxiliary

The regular monthly meeting of the Clement R. Bontemps American Legion Auxiliary, Unit 139, met on Monday, May 9 at the Legion home.

Mrs. Mattie North, president, opened the meeting and the color bearers, Mmes. Lena Cuevas and Beatrice Ladner, advanced the colors. The chaplain, Mrs. Roslyn Weathers, read the opening prayers. Mrs. North led the membership in the Pledge of Allegiance, followed by the Star-Spangled Banner led by Mrs. Rose Ann Thomas, music chairlady, and then the members recited the Preamble.

Miss Danita Scianna, cal' the roll of officers, then read the minutes of the previous meeting. Mrs. Anna Brehm, treasurer, gave her report on the financial status of the unit.

Mrs. North called on Mrs. Margie Schultz, chairlady of the nominating committee to give the membership the following names that were submitted for the 1988-89 election of officers:

Rose Ann Thompson, president; Susan Piazza and Judy Gavney, first vice president; Janet Aime, second vice president; Lena Noonan and Sheri Deagano, secretary; Anna Brehm and Deborah Collier, treasurer; Jeannette Ladner and Penny Brogle, historian; Roslyn Weathers and Lucille Boudreaux, chaplain; Christie LaFontaine, Lena Cuevas and Peggy Kellogg, color bearers; Carmella Boyd and Nell Sanford, sergeant-at-arms; Oris Planchard, Lou Wilkerson, Margaret Prevou and Margie Schultz, executive committee.

The election of officers will take place at our next meeting on June 13; and we would be happy to see as many members there as possible.

Mrs. Shirley Piazza, Americanism chairlady, spoke of the Memorial Day Services held on Sunday, May 29, and Monday, May 30. This is a day we should all remember and participate wholeheartedly to honor the memory of all veterans, living and dead.

Miss Scianna gave her report on Girls' State which will take place in Hattiesburg in June 5-10. The following girls have had their applications approved and are awaiting the day to leave.

They are Jennifer Compreta, Laurie Gagnon, Tori Kimbrell, Michelle Killough, Vicki LaFontaine, Hayden Laroux, Amy Oliver, Amy Pickich, Julie Rutherford and Kimberly Trowbridge.

The auxiliary sends them congratulations and best wishes for a very enjoyable 'adventure' which they will relive many times in their lives. These girls are selected for their scholastic achievements and endorsed by their teachers as qualifying students in many fields.

Mrs. Hazel Wohlschlegel, VACS chairlady, asked for volunteers for the 'ice cream and cake' party and also for the picnic on May 17 and 18.

Mrs. Oris Planchard, emergency chairlady, reported on the progress of raising funds for this cause.

A report was made on the 'Spring Fling' that was held this past month, and various other committees gave their reports.

The meeting was adjourned and refreshments were served.
